

CONCEPT NOTE

MESOAMERICAN INDIGENOUS PEOPLES AND LOCAL COMMUNITIES CLIMATE WEEK 2023

THEME: Ancestral Indigenous and Community-Based Climate Solutions for a Sustainable Future

TYPE OF EVENT: On-site and Virtual

VENUE: Hotel The Panama, Panama City, Panama

DATE: June 13 to 16, 2023

BACKGROUND:

Mesoamerica is a region that stands out for promoting multi-stakeholder dialogue mechanisms to reach agreements and policies for the region's development. Although this characteristic is a strength that has allowed progress to be made in the rights agenda of indigenous peoples and local communities, there is still a long way to go and pending demands to be met to guarantee the conservation of forests, biodiversity, the livelihoods of communities and, above all, their full rights. In this sense, the AMPB, as part of its central actions, has promoted the creation of exchange channels to highlight the contribution and role of communities in the governance of the territories. An example of this has been the recent joint action with the Central American Commission for Environment and Development (CCAD) and the Ministry of Environment of Panama, for the 1st Regional Congress on Forests and Sustainable Landscapes held in Panama in April 2022.

As part of this effort, representatives of Indigenous Peoples and Local Communities articulated in the AMPB, in this Congress, joined their voices in the People's Forests Pavilion, a space that brought together leaders, women, young people from the territories, government officials, civil society organizations, research centers and donors who discussed the main challenges in the region in the fight against climate change, the management and sustainable management of forests in conservation efforts, the real participation of communities guaranteeing their rights, the role of forests in conservation efforts, and the role of communities in the region, research centers and donors who discussed the main challenges of the region in the fight against climate change, the management and sustainable management of forests in conservation efforts, the real participation of communities guaranteeing their rights, the vital role of women and youth as key actors for forest governance and the challenges posed by the post-COVID19 context.

With the purpose of continuing to bring together and strengthen a joint multi-stakeholder vision at the regional level, the "Climate Week of Indigenous Peoples and Local Communities of Mesoamerica 2023" is a space designed by indigenous peoples and local communities to present their territorial experiences and explore, together with strategic allies, the valuable opportunities for direct territorial investment that will allow the scaling up of ancestral solutions to the climate crisis with a territorial perspective, governments of the region, regional alliances, international cooperation, and philanthropic donors the valuable opportunities for direct territorial investment that will allow scaling up the ancestral solutions to the climate crisis with a territorial perspective and ecological and biological connectivity of global importance such as the five great forests of Mesoamerica.

It is expected to be a hybrid event with specific thematic days as outlined in the following sections of this document.

GENERAL OBJECTIVE

To make visible and position the positive impact of the territorial agendas of IPs and LCs on forest protection, biodiversity conservation, and people's livelihoods, before the political authorities of the region, NGOs, and cooperation related to climate change, given the urgency of stopping the accelerated degradation of the region's forests through their experiences of territorial governance, cultural diversity and knowledge in food production, use of medicinal plants and conservation of natural resources.

SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES

- Present and project the territorial agendas of men, women, and youth renewed after the impact of covid-19.
- To present approaches and work proposals from the indigenous peoples and local communities of the Mesoamerican region in a growing environment of citizen insecurity and non-observance of the rights of indigenous peoples and local communities.
- Generate spaces for the exchange and co-creation of innovative ideas and alternative forms of effective and efficient territorial financing to address climate change in the face of accelerated forest deterioration and territorial governance.
- Conduct a multicultural dialogue with indigenous peoples and local communities to generate bonds of alliance and joint work to advance agreements on the social agenda for reestablishing cultural, economic, and environmental rights in the Mesoamerican region.

- Position the approach of indigenous peoples and local communities through the formulation of a joint work agenda to influence public policies and government decision-making.

TUESDAY, JUNE 13/ IN THE AFTERNOON

Thematic Axis: Multidimensional perspective on the opportunities and challenges of direct territorial financing for Indigenous Peoples and Local Communities in the Mesoamerican region.

The Mesoamerican Territorial Fund (FTM) is designed for and for Indigenous Peoples and Local Communities

Objective:

Promote an exchange from the perspective and experience of key actors (donors, managers, and territorial partner organizations) on opportunities and challenges in the implementation of direct territorial financing for indigenous peoples and local communities in Mesoamerica, its impact on the development of organizations, territorial governance, conservation and sustainable management of natural resources with an inclusive and equitable approach.

Expected Result

- Presentation of successful experiences, lessons learned, and best practices from different perspectives of key stakeholders:

- From territorial partner organizations
  - From Territorial Investment Fund operators/managers
  - From Investment (Donors, Cooperation)
- Generate ideas and inspire critical actors to strengthen and culturally adapt the implementation of direct territorial financing considering, on the one hand, the demands and context of the region and the other hand the cooperation regulations.
  - Provide a space to promote strategic alliances and innovative work models among fund operators, encouraging agile and efficient access, implementation, and monitoring mechanisms to operate direct territorial investment and impact metrics.
